Most previous studies on the influence of birth order have looked at children from different families. For instance, some studies have looked at U.S. presidents, Nobel Laureates or NASA astronauts to see whether they are mostly first-born children or 31 born children. However, these studies cannot take into account influences that arise from children being in the same family.

A new study suggests that birth order within families has long sparked sibling rivalry, but it might also impact the child's personality and intelligence. First-borns are typically smarter, 32 younger siblings get better grades and are more outgoing.

The findings weigh in on a long-standing debate: What effect if any does birth order have on a person's life? The results 33 support to some previous hypotheses—for instance, that the eldest sibling tends to have higher aptitude. But the study also 34 other proposed ideas, for example, that first-borns tend to be more extroverted. The findings shed light on the influence of sibling relationships, which often receives less attention compared with 35 the mother-child or father-child relationship. They also suggest some inherent differences between siblings exist, differences that might arise no matter what parents do.

Consumer spending accounts for 70 percent of the gross domestic product, which is the value of everything produced in the U.S. in a year. Consumer spending is 36 into durables (large goods, such as big appliances, not purchased very often), nondurables (food, clothing and things that wear out regularly) and services (banking, day care, medical). When the government 37 its monthly consumer confidence index, it is showing the mood of consumers. When confidence 38, people cut back on spending. Typically, most of that cutback is from durables. After all, those items tend to be more expensive, and their purchase can be postponed. Some services will be cut back—full-service restaurants 39 to fast food, for example—but people still need most of their nondurables and services, such as food and day care.

Demand for the products or services you sell is determined by several factors that apply to all consumers. Demand is based partly on the price of substitute and 40 products. 請依下文回答第 41 題至 45 題：

Poverty is not created by people who are poor. Poverty has been created by the economic and social system that we have designed for the world. It is the institutions that we have built, which created poverty. It is the concepts we developed to understand the reality around us, which contributed to the creation of poverty, made us see things wrongly, and took us down a wrong path, causing misery for people. It is our policies borne out of our reasoning and theoretical framework, with which we explain interactions among institutions and people that caused this problem for many human beings. It is the failure at the top, rather than lack of capability at the bottom which is the root cause of poverty. The most important step to ending poverty is to create employment and income opportunities for the poor. But orthodox economics recognizes only wage-employment. It has no room for self-employment. Yet self-employment is the quickest and easiest way to create employment for the poor. Credit should be accepted as a human right because it is so important for a person who is looking for an income. Credit can create self-employment instantaneously. We are so much influenced by orthodox economics that we forget that our forefathers did not wait for someone else to create jobs for them. They just went ahead in a routine manner to create their own jobs and incomes.

A big step towards eliminating poverty is to make sure that we offer financial services even to the poorest people, that nobody is rejected by a bank on the ground that he or she is a poor person. It will be an uphill task to end poverty in the world unless we create new economic thinking and get rid of the biases in our concepts, institutions, policies, and above all, our mindsets created by the existing orthodoxy.

請依下文回答第 46 題至 50 題：

The festival of San Fermin, or the Running of the Bulls as it is more commonly known outside Spain, is held in honor of Saint Fermin in Pamplona in Spain every year from 6th to 14th July. It is also traditionally held in other places such as towns and villages across Spain and Portugal, some cities in Mexico, and southern France during the summer.

The origin of the run can be traced back to the 14th century in northeastern Spain, where bull breeders needed to transport their bulls from the fields outside the city to the bullring, where they would be killed. To speed up the transporting process, workers would hurry the cattle using tactics of fear and excitement. Later this practice turned into a competition, as young adults would attempt to race in front of the bulls. It seemed that the modern-day celebration has evolved from this as well as individual commercial and bullfighting fiestas.

The Pamplona bull run is the highest-profile event of the San Fermin festival. The first bull running is on 7th July, followed by one on each of the following mornings of the festival, beginning every day at 8 a.m. sharp. It all starts with a rocket fired to confirm that the gate of the bullring has been opened. After runners pray to San Fermin, a second rocket announces that the bulls, typically six, have left. The bulls and the runners then proceed along the route. A third rocket is set off once all the bulls have entered the bullring. When the bulls are in the bullpen, the final rocket ends the run.

The vast number of participants nowadays adds to the already considerable danger of running alongside wild bulls weighing in the region of 700 kg each. Although plenty security and first-aid personnel are on hand, there is really little they can do to prevent people from injury, or even death, during the running of the bulls.

- 46 What is the third paragraph mainly about?
- (A) The schedule and proceeding of the bull run.
 - (B) The number of the bulls running in the event.

 - (D) The importance of runners' praying to San Fermin.
- 47 According to the passage, which of the following statements is TRUE?
- (A) The second rocket would be fired after the bulls have left the bullring.
 - (B) Altogether four rockets would be fired to complete the bull run.
 - (C) Rockets are fired to create an atmosphere of excitement for the bull run.
 - (D) The festival of San Fermin can be traced back to the bullfighting tradition.
- 48 Which of the following is NOT mentioned in the passage?
- (A) The origin of the running of the bulls.
 - (B) Places where the bull running is held.
 - (C) Rules for participants in the running of the bulls.

- 49 What does tactics mean in the second paragraph?
