Forming a habit of making a to-do list every day can help us manage our time better. And if this is done in a more effective way, it can even enable us to have a successful life. Many famous people throughout the history all 36 themselves to making a to-do list that works out for them. Thomas Edison, one of the great inventors in human history, made a daily to-do list by recording in great details his ideas of invention. Many useful products that he eventually created all came from his to-do lists. Another more 37 example is the ex-CEO of Apple, Mr. Steve Jobs. Jobs did his to-do list in a more simple way. He only wrote down key words in the list by focusing particularly on the challenges Apple was facing. Many of the unsolved problems mentioned in his lists became later Apple's great strength and 38 points which other companies cannot yet achieve. Richard Branson, the English businessman and inventor who 39 the Virgin group, puts down his ideas for his future business plans in the list. In order to fulfill his business dreams, Branson also includes in his lists the names of people who can help him complete his business projects. 40 what they have done with their to-do lists, these successful people have helped improve human life to a great degree.

Tammy is a teacher in a kindergarten. Every morning, she needs to arrive at 7:30 a.m. in order to get her classroom ready for her students. Before her class begins at 9:00 a.m., she must attend to her students who arrive earlier. At 8:30 a.m. when most students arrive in class, she has to let them 41 their morning snacks first to make sure that they do not get hungry while having their morning classes. After the class starts, her students make her very busy for the rest of the day. They learn new things and play games. But 42 those students are all very young children, they do not always pay attention to her. Sometimes, they fight, shout or cry. Tammy still needs to remain patient to all of them.

Especially in the beginning of a new semester when more and more new students come to her class, Tammy becomes much busier 43 before because she has to take more care of the new ones to let them get used to the new learning environment. And if there are too many new students, she will certainly need another teacher to help her. Teaching while also caring for those very young children makes her feel very 44 by the end of the day. However, even after school or over the weekends, she still needs to attend meetings and plan new lessons. Teaching in a kindergarten requires a lot of hard work from her. It also 45 much of her time, energy and patience. But Tammy loves her job as a kindergarten teacher and she finds it satisfying when she sees many of her students grow because of her teaching.

These days so many marriages end in divorce that our sacred vows no longer ring with truth. “Happily ever after” and “Till death do us part” are expressions that seem on the way to becoming obsolete. Why has it become so hard for couples to stay together? What goes wrong? What has happened to us that close to one-half of all marriage are destined for the divorce courts? How could we have created a society in which 42 percent of our children will grow up in single-parent homes? If statistics could only measure loneliness, regret, pain, loss of self-confidence and fear of the future, the number would be beyond quantifying.

Even though each broken marriage is unique, we can still find the common perils, the common causes of despair. Each marriage has crisis points, and each marriage tests endurance, the capacity for both intimacy and change. Outside pressures (such as job loss, illness, infertility, trouble with a child, care of aging parents and all the other plagues of life) hit marriage the way hurricanes blast our shores. Some marriages survive these storms, and others don't. Marriages fail, however, not simply because of the outside weather, but because the inner climate becomes too hot or too cold, too turbulent or too stupefying.

Marriage takes some kind of sacrifice, not dreadful self-sacrifice of the soul, but some level of compromise. Marriage requires sexual, financial, and emotional discipline. A man and a woman cannot follow every impulse; they cannot allow themselves to stop growing or changing.

Divorce is not an evil act. Sometimes it provides salvation for people who have grown hopelessly apart and were frozen in patterns of pain and mutual unhappiness. Divorce can be, despite its initial devastation, like the first cut of the surgeon's knife, a step toward new health and a good life.
