"Oh! It's already twelve o'clock," Nadia cried when she woke up. She brushed her teeth and washed her face immediately. However, she spent more than one hour to dress up and make herself look more beautiful. She looked again and again at herself in the mirror. Finally, happy with how she looked, she went out and took a bus. When she arrived at the city center, she stopped a taxi on a busy road. She said to the driver: "Can you see that young man on the other side of the road?" "Yes," said the taxi-driver. The young man was standing outside a department store and looked at his watch not very patiently every few seconds. "Please drive me over there," said Nadia. There were a lot of cars and buses on the road. The driver asked her: "Are you afraid to cross the road?" "Not really!" She explained. Questions 6-10 are based on the following passage: One of the most popular fields of study for college students these days is leisure studies. The names of the courses, "Introduction to Sport" or "The Philosophy of Sport," call forth scenes of college students idly talking of Frisbees and sleeping on the grass. But leisure studies is a deadly serious field: students learn how to run the sports programs of big city park departments, how to manage a ski resort or a vacation hotel. The students learn how to organize a teenage soccer league where little or no interest exists in the sport, how to teach and keep beginners interested, and how to keep track of admissions money. To do all these things, they must take courses in psychology and business management along with those in leisure. As people grow more involved in sports activities, in vacations, and in trips, the job outlook for leisure majors is quite good; but can you imagine trying to explain to your parents that you're spending their money studying leisure?

- 6 What is the main idea of this passage?
  - (A) College is becoming too easy.
  - (B) Psychology and business management are important for leisure studies.
  - (C) Leisure studies students learn to run city park departments.
  - (D) Leisure studies is actually a serious field of study.

(B) Leisure studies includes the study of business management.         (C) The need for leisure studies majors is increasing. (C) leisure studies majors need not be physically fit.         9       It is hard to explain to the parents that their children are spending money studying leisure because         (A) leisure studies majors need not be physically fit.
