In an effort to attract more passengers, airlines are now providing frequent travelers with services that rival those of first-rate restaurants and hotels. The routine privileges most companies offer first-class and business clientele include express check-in, free drinks and headsets, and more refined menus. In addition, a growing number of airlines have amenities such as fully reclining sleeper seats and furnish eye shades and slipper socks. At some international airports, companies have established membership lounges that allow business travelers the use of facsimile machines, personal computers, and private conference rooms. A few have even gone so far as to install video systems on the arm rests of seats and to serve meals upon request rather than on a fixed schedule. All of these services come at a price, however, that is reflected in ticket prices substantially above those for regular coach class.

Canning is a method of preserving food over extended periods of time. The process involves sealing food in containers and heating it in order to kill bacteria that could eventually cause spoilage. While most canned food is produced by commercial companies, some is done at home.

Homegrown fruits and vegetables such as apples and tomatoes are the most popular foods to can. Even certain kinds of meats are suitable for canning. However, it is not advisable to heat produce such as avocados because of the changes in taste and texture that occur. Other foods, including cucumbers and peppers, can be canned only if they are first pickled and then cooked at very low temperatures.

Properly canned food can be saved for as long as three years. If not properly sealed, the food can be spoiled by the growth of organisms. In several cases, bacteria can cause a fatal form of poisoning called "botulism." For this reason, it is very important to check the seal of the jar or bottle regularly to make sure it has remained undisturbed.
