四、閱讀測驗【請在下列各題中選出最適當的答案】

In an intriguing study, Dutch psychologists followed up on some earlier work on male height to find out more about what leads women to prefer taller guys. They were also curious to learn how and why people are satisfied with their own height. Evolutionarily speaking, one might argue that a tall man would be preferred by women because, if you follow the argument, he'll be stronger and better able to keep off physical threats to his family. However, unless taller equals stronger, faster, and smarter, height wouldn't seem to offer any particularly unique advantage. Taller men may only seem stronger because we associate height with weight and strength. And being "looked up to," quite literally, may at some level lead taller men to feel that they have superior qualities. The idea that tall man equals power may simply be part of the male-female power differential. Men are taller because of hormonal influences, to be sure. This then is translated into social attitudes. We're all conditioned by media images to prefer men and women with a certain kind of appearance.

The psychologists wanted to understand not only who prefers whom in terms of height, but also how people feel about their own height. The participants in this study were 650 first-year psychology students who received course credit for completing the survey. They estimated their own height and reported on their sex, ethnicity, and sexual orientation. The rest of the questions asked them to report on their relationship status, the height of their partner, the satisfaction with their own height, and their satisfaction with the height of their partners. The results on partner preferences are a bit discouraging if you're a short man. In general, women were more likely than men to think that the man should be taller and they tended to not want to be in a relationship in which they were taller than their male partners. Men liked being taller than their partners, but they didn't care about the height difference as much as women did.

【3】21. What is the passage mainly about?

- ① An interesting myth about height equaling intelligence and wealth
- ② An effect of media on women's ideas about their looks
- ③ A study of people's ideas about height
- ④ A surprising finding on men's height

【3】22. Which of the following is supported by the passage?

- ① Taller men are always stronger and smarter.
- ② Taller women are on average faster and more powerful.
- ③ Being tall may not actually offer any unique advantage.
- ④ Men tend to care more than women about the height of their partners.

【1】23. Which of the following is true?

- ① Some women might think that taller men are better able to protect the family.
- ② Studies have proven that taller men are stronger and smarter.
- ③ The expression "to look up to" indicates the advantage of shorter women.
- ④ The media repeatedly associate height with political status.

【2】24. What can be inferred from the passage?

- ① Both men and women prefer their partners to be taller and stronger.
- ② Men and women feel somewhat differently about height in a relationship.
- ③ Neither men nor women like tall women because they appear to be too powerful.
- ④ Parents should not care so much about their children's height as their grades.

【4】25. According to the passage, which of the following may influence people's preference for height?

- ① Political stability
- ② Social status
- ③ Areas of major
- ④ Media images
