四、閱讀測驗【請依照段落上下文意，選出最適當的答案】

第一篇：

Located in the Venetian Lagoon in northeast Italy, Poveglia Island is one of the most haunted islands ever. In the past the island served different purposes, such as a safe haven, a military checkpoint, and a mental institution. It can be said that its peculiarity resides in the spooky and terrifying aspects and legends behind the abandoned island. According to the research from the Worcester Polytechnic Institute, Poveglia had probably been populated before the Romans by the Euganei. Proto-Italians first inhabited the Veneto region as early as 2,000 BCE. During the war with Genoa in the 14th century, the so-called Chioggia War, the island inhabitants were forced to move to another island in the lagoon. Accordingly, Poveglia was transformed into a military outpost. In 1348 the bubonic plagues arrived in Venice and Poveglia like many other small islands. To avoid a major spread of the plague, Venetians created the Lazzaretto, a separate area where the sick people were housed. In the area, archeologists have discovered thousands of corpses. Poveglia was used as a quarantine location where many of the bodies were incinerated to avoid the spreading of the plague.

In the 20th century, the government decided to turn the island into asylums for people with mental illness. Legends and stories came out of the place, narrating the terrifying experiments a mad doctor conducted on patients during those years. Some say that the doctor committed suicide and the tormented souls of the victims still lived on the island. All buildings were abandoned since 1968. Now the structures have become crumbling and damaged. There are no boats that make regular stops at this island, and the entire island is abandoned. Locals and tourists are prohibited from visiting, and fishermen steer clear of the accursed place.

On HuffPost, a progressive news website, it can be read that the crew from the American reality television series Ghost Adventures got seriously spooked on the island. Their 2009 episode on Poveglia, where the television program crew were stranded on the island for 24 hours, is full of recorded curses, apparitions, creepy music, weird energy, inexplicable equipment malfunctions, and off-the-charts ghost recordings. Several staff members used their best Italian to ask the ghosts some questions and seemed to get responses from the dark abyss.

For decades anthropologists have been studying strange and unusual cultures all over the world. One of the strangest peoples of all is a group called the Nacirema, a legendary tribe living in North America.

The territory of the Nacirema is located between the Canadian Cree and the Tarahumare of Mexico. Relatively little is known of the origin of this people, though they are said to have come from somewhere east. In fact, the Nacirema may be related to certain European peoples.

Nacirema people spend a lot of time on the appearance and health of their bodies. In Nacirema culture the body is generally believed to be ugly and likely to decay. The only way this decay can be prevented is through participation in certain magical ceremonies. In every Nacirema house there is a special shrine room dedicated to this purpose. Some Nacirema houses have more than one shrine room. In Nacirema culture, it is believed that the more shrine rooms a family has, the richer it is.

What is the shrine room? The focal point is a box built into the wall. Inside the box is a large collection of magical potions, medicines, and creams. Below the box is a small font from which water is obtained. Every day each member of the Nacirema family enters, and receives magic, holy water from the fountain.

In Nacirema culture, the mouth is considered one of the most important parts of the body. The Nacirema are fascinated by the mouth and believe that its condition has an important and supernatural effect on all social relationships. Naciremans visit "holy-mouth-people" once or twice a year. If there are any holes in the teeth, a supernatural substance is placed in each hole. It is said that the purpose of this practice is to prevent decay in the teeth and to help the Naciremans to make friends and find spouses.

④ An entertainment room with a collection of potions and creams.

【4】49. Which of the following is closest in meaning to "decay" in the third paragraph?
